CHALLENGER' 1/KFOR

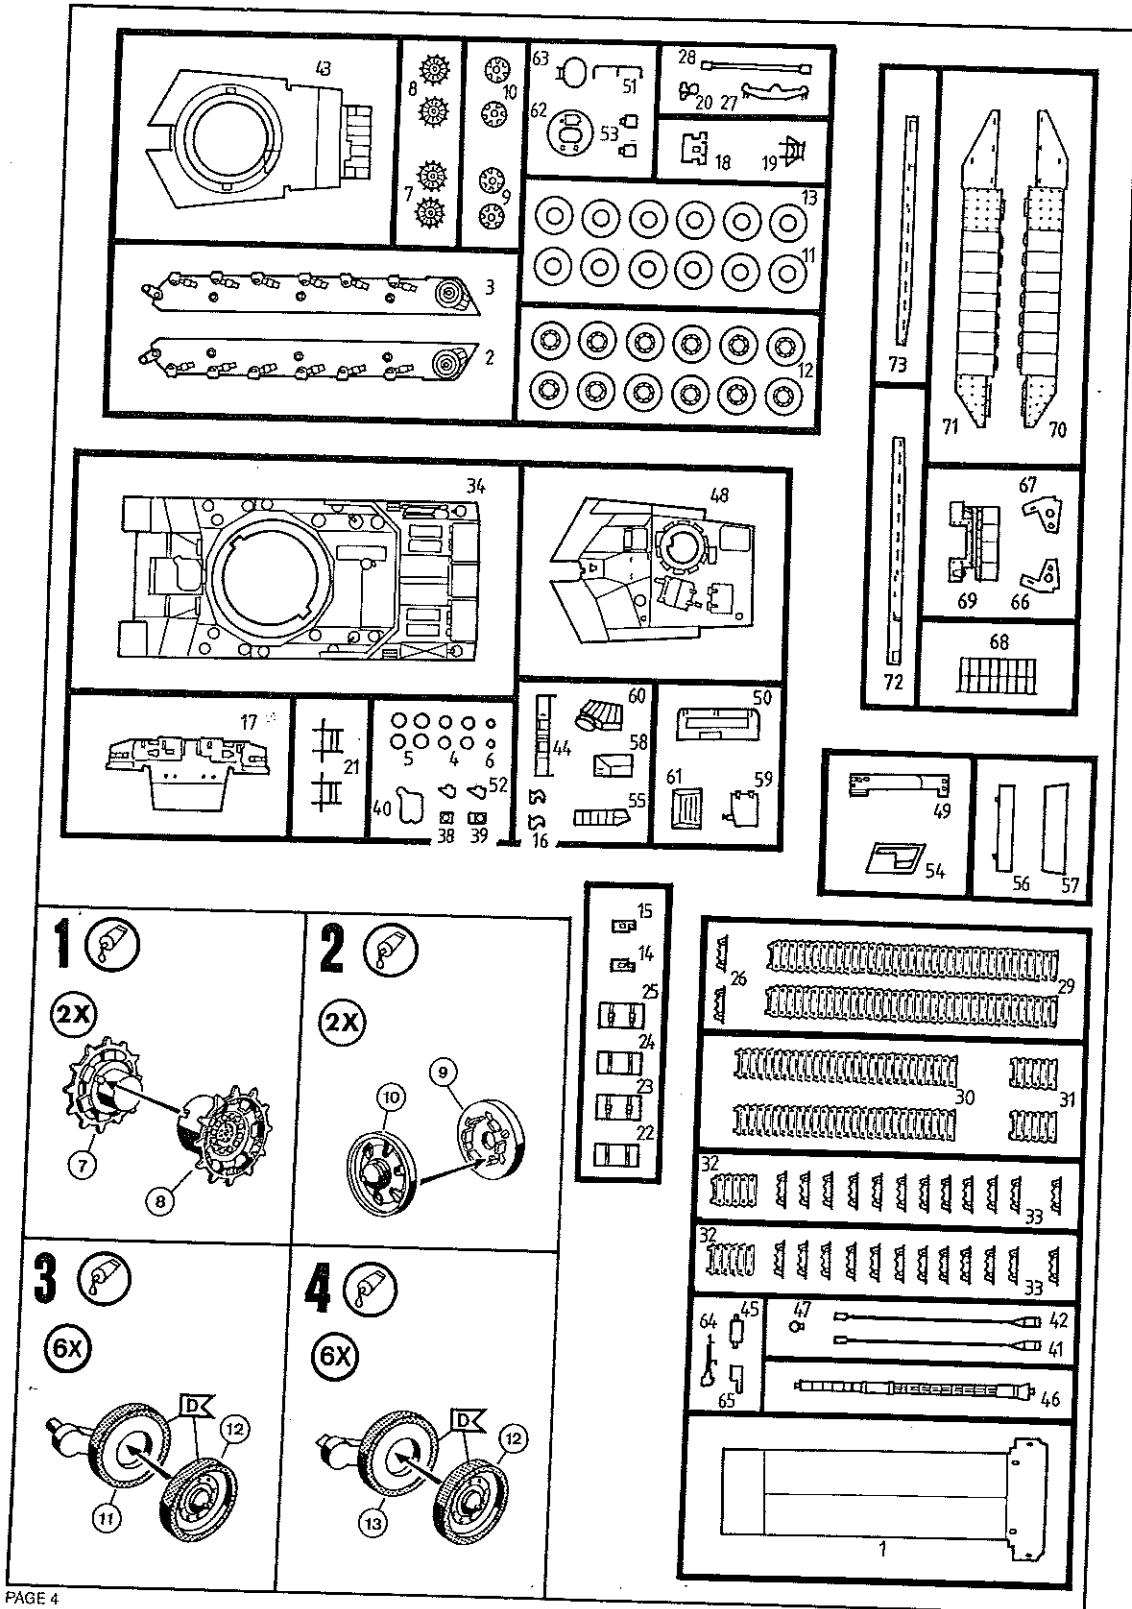

Der „Challenger“ 1 Main Battle Tank war eine Weiterentwicklung aus dem Shir 2, der ursprünglich für den Iran entwickelt worden war, und wurde im März 1983 von der britischen Armee eingeführt. Als Nachrüstung erhielten die meisten Fahrzeuge ab 1988 Halterungen mit Fässern am Heck, in denen zusätzlicher Kraftstoff mitgeführt werden kann. Bewaffnet ist der „Challenger“ 1 mit einer 120 mm L11A5 Kanone mit gezogenem Rohr, mit der zweiteilige Munition verschossen wird. Als Antrieb dient ein Condor V-12 Zylinder Dieselmotor mit einer Leistung von 1.200 PS, mit dem eine Höchstgeschwindigkeit von bis zu 56 km/h auf der Straße erreicht werden kann. Das Gefechtsgewicht beträgt 62.000 kg, die Besatzung besteht aus vier Mann. Der „Challenger“ 1 wurde während seiner Einsatzzeit beständig modernisiert, so z.B. mit einer Zusatpanzerung an der Fahrzeugwanne. Daher sind die im Rahmen der Kosovo Force (KFOR) eingesetzten Challenger 1 mit der aus dem Golf-Krieg (Operation Desert Sabre) im Jahre 1991 bekannt gewordene Zusatpanzerung an Wannenbug und -seiten ausgestattet.

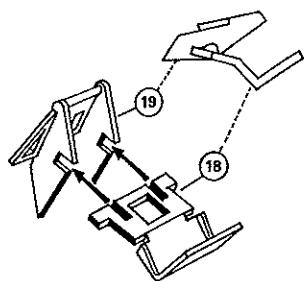

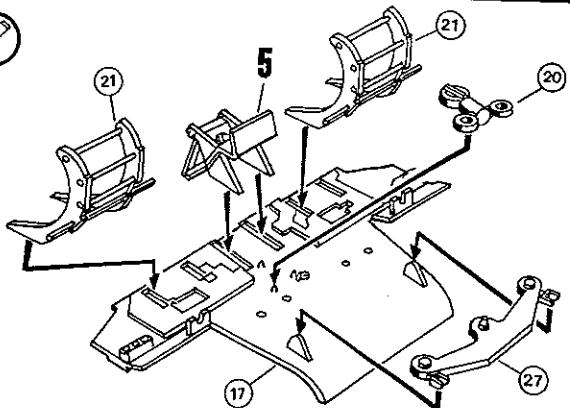

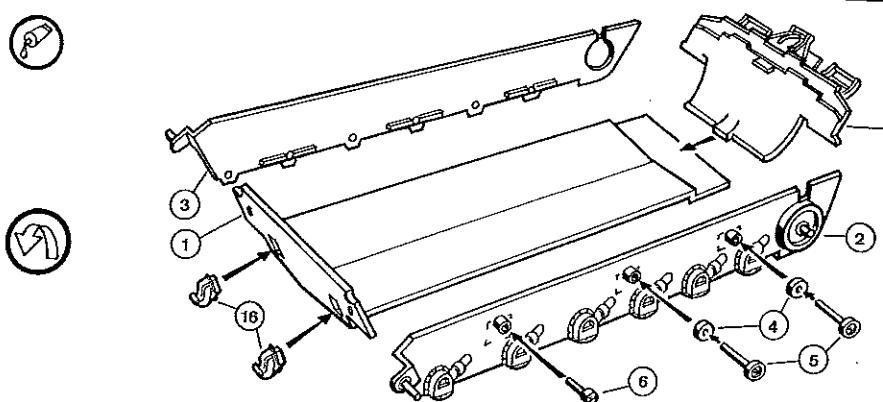

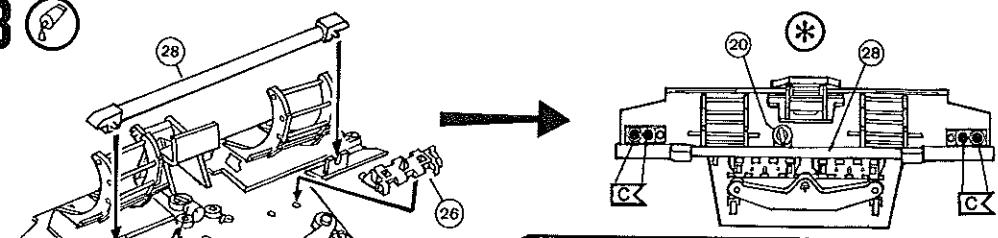

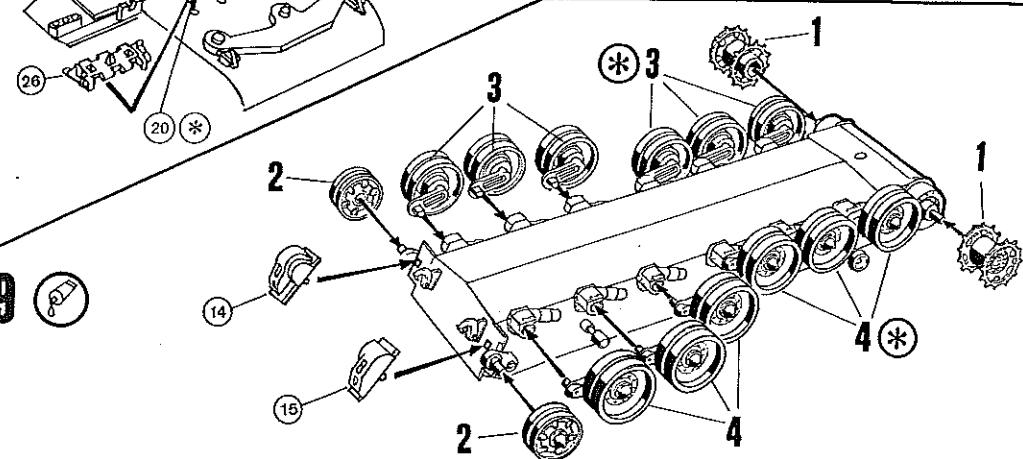

CHALLENGER' 1 KFOR

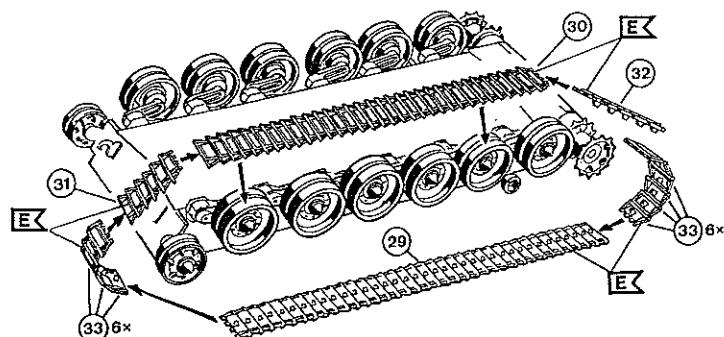

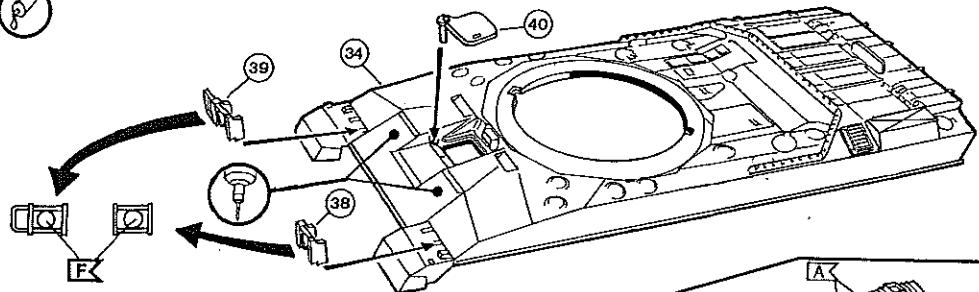

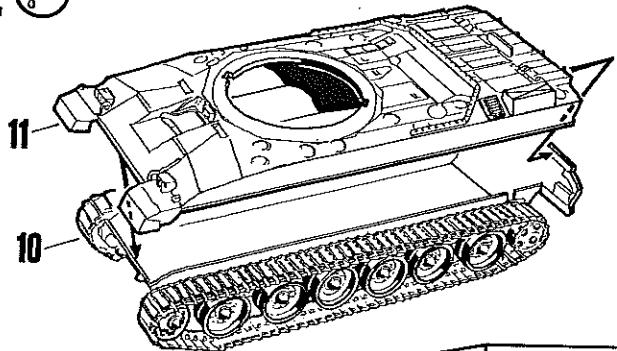

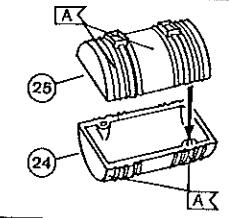

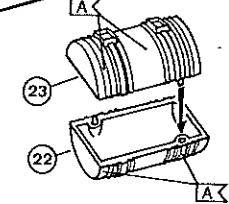

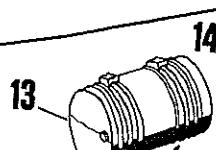

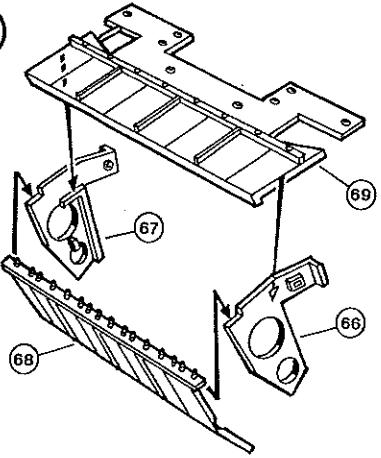

The Challenger 1 main battle tank was developed from the Shir 2, which was originally developed for Iran and was introduced into the British Army in March 1983. From 1988 onwards most of the vehicles were retrofitted with facilities for additional fuel tanks at the rear. The Challenger 1 is armed with one 120 mm L11A5 cannon with rifled barrel, which can fire separate-loading ammunition. It is powered by a 1,200 h.p. Condor V-12 Diesel engine with a maximum speed of 56 km/h on the road. It has a combat weight of 62,000 kg and a four-man crew. The Challenger 1 was continually upgraded during its period in service, for instance with additional armour on the hull. Thus the Challenger 1 used in the Kosovo Force (KFOR) were equipped with the additional armour on the front and sides of the hull that became familiar in the Gulf War (Operation Desert Sabre) in 1991.
